The tablets will eliminate the need for the Clerk's Office to print paper poll books which is very expensive and time consuming. Another huge benefit is if a voter shows up to a precinct to vote and they aren't registered to vote in that particular precinct poll workers can conduct a quick search and find out the precinct the voter is actually registered in. These poll books are also capable of providing various reports that will be beneficial to the Clerk's Office. These poll books will be used in the November General Election.

Indian Creek Watershed Association representatives Judy Azulay, Howdy Henritz and Nancy Bouldin appeared before the County Commission. These individuals presented Commissioners with a summary of a report titled Geologic Hazards in the Karst Regions of Virginia and West Virginia: investigations and Analysis Concerning the Proposed Mountain Valley Gas Pipeline. This report was conducted by Ernst Kastning, Ph.D, P.G., retired professor of Geology at Radford University, Certified Professional Geologist, and a recognized authority on karst in the Appalachian region. The regional focus of the report includes Summers and Monroe counties in West Virginia, as well as Giles, Craig, Montgomery, and Roanoke counties in Virginia-all of which are marked by karst and mountain terrain. Key points made by Dr. Kastning are that karst, by itself, is a significant risk factor in sitting a gas pipeline, especially one of this size. Other significant hazards in the region include: land instability and steep slopes, weak soils, and seismicity(the pipeline passes through the center of the Giles County Seismic Zone. Dr. Kastning stated that when two or more of the factors are involved, the hazards are “compounded and exacerbated. In his Executive Summary, Dr. Kastning stated “the karst and associated hazards constitute a serious incompatibility with the proposed pipeline and the effect of these threats of the line on the natural environment, renders this region as a No-Build Zone for the region.

Conference Call With Senator Joe Manchin

Donald J. Evans, County Clerk, advised Commissioners that he participated in a conference call this morning hosted by US Senator Joe Manchin. Electronic Poll Books

At the request of Donald J. Evans, County Clerk, Commissioner Ashley made a motion to purchase 16 electronic poll books to be used during the election. Ashley further moved the county finance the cost of these poll books with ES&S, the manufacturer, making five annual payments with this first payment due within 30 days of contract execution. Commissioner Miller second these motions. Vote was unanimous. Evans said these poll books have several benefits. If the voter enters a precinct and it's not their correct precinct, the poll workers can search the voters name and let them know the precinct they are registered in. These poll books can provide a number of reports throughout the day related to turnout that will be very beneficial to the Clerk's Office.

Ms. Azualy informed the Commission that Ernst Kastning, Ph.D, P.G, a retired professor of Geology from Radford University, a Certified Professional Geologist and a recognized authority on karst in the Appalachian region, recently prepared a report stating that the karst and associated hazards constitute a serious incompatibility with the proposed Mountain Valley Pipeline. Professor Kastning said that this region including Monroe and Summers counties, should be considered a “no-build” zone for the pipeline. These individuals also provided the Commission with some written material detailing how their Interactive Environmental Map, which is available online, will help identify hazards and risks posed by the proposed Mountain Valley Pipeline. In closing, these individuals asked the County Commission to 1) submit a follow up letter to FERC for an independent comprehensive hydro geological study of the water resources of Monroe County before issuing the Draft Environmental Impact Statement or approving an MVP route through Monroe County 2) Request the WV Geological Society Survey and WV DEP undertake and complete a thorough mapping and study of the complex karst region at the base of Peter's Mountain. 3) Request that the US Army Corps of Engineers and the WVDEP wait until a final route has been determined before issuing any permits, and issue only individual permits for the 404, 401, and Stormwater permits. The County Commission advised they would discuss their request to write these letters and get back with them.
